To my loving Husband, Jerry

Jerry, you can never know how much you have enriched my life. You have made me a better person and have given me a life that other women only dream about. I love you for that.

I knew that I loved you when we went the movie and you asked the cashier if you could purchase (not get or buy) a ticket. I thought how neat that was and realized that you would always strive for the highest road. That is one of my fondest memories of you. We were in high school and had walked to the movie.

I also treasure your loyalty and faithfulness. My former neurologist, Dr. Green, once told me that I should really cherish you. He said that it was his experience that most men in your shoes would have gone down the road and escaped dealing with my illness.

I realized then that you were that special person who would be the one who runs the whole race with his whole heart and strives to do what is right not what is easy.

You are my touchtone, without you I would be lost. We have shared such a great life together and have done things that others have only dreamed about.

When we were young would we have ever thought we would end up at this point, together still facing something that we cannot control, but knowing that we can conquer it by facing it together as we have all the challenges of our whole lives.

I thank God for you every day. You have given me a life that I would not change with anyone. You are so special and I cannot tell you what you mean to me, except to tell you that have made my life complete.

Love you always and forever,
